01.28.2012

not that

The modern world has to learn what it already knows, become what it already is, through a great exorcism of obstacles, through practice. We can escape the commonplace only by manipulating it, controlling it, thrusting it into our dreams or surrendering it to the free play of our subjectivity.

Everything starts from subjectivity, but nothing stays there. Today less than ever.

The struggle between subjectivity and everything that corrupts it is about to widen the terrain of the old class struggles. It will revitalise it and make it more bitter. The desire to live is a political decision.

from AN EARLY HISTORY OF IMAGE BANK

1974

"Art's Birthday: The Decca-Dance" is inspired by Robert Filliou's idea of a celebration for the birth of art.

It was the largest event involving the correspondence network. The event, hosted by Lowell Darling and Willoughby Sharp, was staged as a parody of Academy Awards ceremony similar in strategy to the General Idea beauty pageant. The event was well documented on film & video by Ant Farm. The Mondo Artie script by AA Bronson and EE Claire and accompanying ephemera were published by Image Bank as a multiple edition. This event marked the end of the pioneering days of networking and the beginning of what has become known as "Mail Art".

from <http://front.bc.ca/performanceart/events/1916>

January 17, 1974

The Decca Dance and the celebration of the 1,000,011th anniversary of art, organized by Image Bank, Lowell Darling, Willoughby Sharp, Ant Farm, General Idea, and the Western Front. The fall of 1973 was spent in preparation for this momentous occasion, a celebration of the Eternal Network that took place in the splendid ballroom of the former Elk's Lodge on MacArthur Park in Hollywood. Susan Subtle, Les Petits Bonbons, John Jack

Baylin, John Dowd, Irene Dogmatic, Anna Banana, Victor

Coleman, Andy Graffiti and a host of correspondence artists from across North America appeared for the ritual celebration of Art's 1,000,011th Birthday and Mail Art Awards Ceremony. The stage show, a parody of the Academy Awards, featured a male chorus resplendent

in tuxedos and Shark Fin Bathing Caps moving in stately symmetry to the inimitable crooning of andogyne Pascal.
It could be said to mark the peak of the mail art movement,
and for many signalled the end of it. Copiously documented
on film, video, and in print.
